About Conference

Various phytoconstituents obtained from nature have wide biological activities in chronic diseases and have wide therapeutic efficacy. The main advantage of using phytoconstituents, as it provides free from adverse effects treatment where none of the medication can do. However, the physiochemical properties such as poor solubility, poor permeation, and non-targeting at the active site will create a barrier which hinders its therapeutic efficacy.

So, various strategies are employed to overcome these barriers and provide uniform receptor targeting at the active site in desired concentration and improved therapeutic efficacy. To fulfill the dream of Sir Paul Ehrlich, concern to self triggering drugs from natural origin and now day by day in the age of augmented technology, we are at the urge to explore these technologies with different strategies.

These strategies will constitute novel drug delivery systems (NDDS), such as nanoparticles, emulsion-based formulations, liposomes, phytosomes, microspheres, and topical based formulations. In this conference, we will highlight some novel applications of NDDS based approaches for enhancing the therapeutic potential of phytoconstituents having wide biological activities.

The goal of this conference will be to congregate of experts from high threshold Research area for teaching of different aspects of advances in Novel Drug delivery systems using phytoconstituent concept. The objective is to provide a forum for the exchange of knowledge, definition of the status quo and design of a common strategy for improved knowledge dissemination to specific audiences belonging to the area of phytoformulation research. A clear understanding of advantages and limitations of use of phytoconstituents in novel formulations will be transmitted to all target groups.
